

Racers Edge Motorsports Preview: Grand Prix of Miami

After a month long break, Racers Edge Motorsports will travel to the Grand Prix of Miami for the second round of the 2010 GRAND-AM Rolex Sports Car Series presented by Crown Royal Cask No. 16. Regular season drivers Jordan Taylor and Todd Lamb will pilot the No. 30 Idemitsu Racing Oil/Mazda/Moton Suspension Technology Mazda RX-8 at Homestead Miami Speedway's 2.3 mile, 11 turn road course.

Although this will be only their second race together, Taylor and Lamb hope to improve upon the team's 6th place finish in Miami last year. Lamb is already familiar with the Miami track: he earned a 5th place finish there in the Continental Tire Sports Car Challenge race (GS class) in 2009, while Taylor has also raced at the Speedway on several occasions scoring a 9th place finish there in 2009 driving a Daytona Prototype.

Team owner Jon Mirachi is really anxious for the Homestead race to get here. "After the big disappointment at the Rolex 24, with the engine failing less than 3 hours into the race, the entire Racers Edge crew can't wait to get back to the track. Following a race like that, all you can do is get ready for the next one and once the car hits the track we'll all be busy getting the car set up and ready to compete for the win. It's the best way to put the 24 behind us. I like Homestead and with our car, team and driver line up, I like our chances to win as well!"

Racers Edge Motorsports showed high potential for the 2010 season during the season opening Rolex 24 at Daytona. Jordan Taylor posted an impressive qualifying time that secured a second place starting spot for the No. 30 RX-8, and battled his way into the GT class lead. Unfortunately a broken bolt in the engine ended the team's day after only 2.5 hours of the 24 hour race, relegating the team to a 28th place finish in class.

If Racers Edge Motorsports performance in the early part of the Rolex 24 is any indication, be sure to keep an eye on the red No. 30 at the Grand Prix of Miami.

Coverage of the Grand Prix of Miami begins on Saturday, March 6th at 5:00PM on SPEED Channel.
